

"POP GUN" REVOLT HAS AN ECHO HERE IN SAFE SEIZURE

Offices of Deposed Guatemala
Consulate on Broad Street Raided.

The Guatemalan revolution, begun and completed in that nation within a few hours, has really only begun in the United States, with the Centre Street Police Court as the chief battle ground. The mysterious, sudden death of Manuel Diguéz, Consul General here of the deposed Herrera Government, had a sequel in the removal of the safe and office contents from the Consulate and refusal of the National City Bank to recognize requisitions on the $1,000,000 Guatemalan funds in its vaults.

Enrique Munos, former Secretary to the late Consul Diguéz, ordered removed just prior to the latter's death, and now claiming to be the accredited representative here of the military dictatorship, proclaimed by Gen. Orellano was present before Magistrate Renaud to-day in Centre Street Court, on a warrant charging unlawful entry. An additional complication in the Latin-American revolution is that the United States Government has refused to recognize the Orellano Government.

William Shorosh, an attorney of No. 51 Chambers Street, was engaged by J. Bond Smith of Washington as counsel to Dr. Bianchi, Minister to the United States of the Herrera regime, to seek the return of the safe and other office data. Mr. Shorosh, upon the advice of Acting District Attorney Pecora, took out a warrant for Munos.

When Dr. Bianchi instructed Consul Diguéz to remove Munos things began to happen. Dr. Bianchi was never informed if Munos had been removed, but on Jan. 17 sent Julio Aparicio from Washington to locate the new Secretary. When Diguéz suddenly died Dr. Miguel Prado, Secretary to the Embassy, was sent here as the new Consul General.

When Dr. Prado reached New York he found Munos—supposed to be deposed—in charge at No. 50 Broad Street. To avoid violence the new Consul General entered into an agreement with A. L. Hayman, superintendent of the building to deny either himself or Munos access to the office for ten days to await developments, and on this assurance returned to Washington.

Uniform.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Although unable to attend the meeting of the Girl Scouts in Atlanta this week, Mrs. Harding readily agreed to the request for her picture. It was taken in her uniform as Commander in Chief of the Girl Scouts of America, which office she accepted after entering the White House.

The picture of Mrs. Harding, the first in her official uniform, was taken on the south portico of the White House. It will be used by the Girl Scouts in furthering their work during the convention week. President Harding occupies a similar position to Mrs. Harding at the head of the Boy Scouts.

Munos, on advice of his counsel, Perry Allen, forced their way into the office and removed one of the safes and all the official data to No. 82 Beaver Street. Mr. Allen admitted this, as well as the facts related by Mr. Shorosh, before Magistrate Renaud. He declared, however, that although the Orellano Government had not been recognized so far, recognition was but a short way off.

"When the former Consul died," Mr. Allen told the court, "my client became his lawful successor. When he removed the articles he was acting under instructions from the new Secretary of State of Guatemala. The truth of the matter is that the plaintiff's Government has fallen and their supply of money is cut off. There was money in the safe."

Mr. Shorosh in reply quoted the recent decision of the Appellate Division in the case of the Soviet Government of Russia against Jean Jacques Chirano when it was ruled that the United States cannot deal with any Government it has not recognized. Magistrate Renaud adjourned the case to Tuesday, when briefs will be submitted and testimony begun.

The National City Bank, on advice of counsel, refused to obey the standing order of years to make monthly disbursements for Embassy salaries and expenses when the revolutionary situation grew too thick to penetrate.

Campaign for Beer and Wines
Rapidly Being Organized
All Over Country.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26.—Eighteen States are organized, ready for the big smash for beer and light wines in the next Congressional elections, Fred W. Marcolin, organizer of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, Inc., declared to-day. Ohio, Maryland, Texas, New Jersey, Michigan and Illinois were the States in which the most strenuous battles were centering, he added.

William H. Stayton, director of the association, is on an extensive trip, organizing headquarters in Montgomery, Ala., New Orleans, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Little Rock and Memphis. He will conclude the tour with an organization meeting in Cincinnati next month.

Meanwhile, State Chairmen are staging intensive campaigns in every Congressional district in the United States, according to Marcolin.

TIUG ATTACKS GIRL NEAR WEEHAWKEN

Her Screams Bring Help—Second
Case of Its Kind in Three Weeks.

The second attack on a young woman within three weeks at the same place on the Palisades occurred last evening, when Miss Frances Menfien, twenty-four, of No. 18 Hudson Place, Weehawken, returning from her work in New York, was struck on the head by a man opposite Gruert's Causeway. She was knocked down, dazed, but managed to scream and the man fled. Lieut. Detective Michael Lyons and several other persons heard the girl and took her to her home in an automobile. On Jan. 6, Miss Bella Taretta, twenty-one, of No. 142 Boulevard East, Weehawken, was attacked in precisely the same way at the same spot at about the same time in the evening. She received a scalp wound.

TAXI DRIVER HELD AFTER ACCIDENT.

Howard E. Sharkey, a taxicab owner and driver of No. 424 West 42d Street, was held in $5,000 bail on a charge of reckless assault to-day in West Side Court. Detective Michael Lyons, No. 62 West 40th Street was knocked down and received a fracture of the thigh and a broken leg on Jan. 20. The cab that hit him escaped. A bystander took the number and Sharkey's arrest followed. He denied he was the driver, and will have an examination on Jan. 28.

GAS IN HOME KILLS MAN THRICE GASED IN WAR

Jets in Stove Open—Ex-Soldier Had Recently Married.

A war veteran, gassed three times overseas, was found dead in his home to-day with all the jets in the gas stove open. Walter Delaney, twenty-four, according to his mother, Mary, had been in ill health ever since his return from France and had frequent spells of despondency. He was found before breakfast with a coat over his head and sitting in a chair in the kitchen of his home, No. 887 St. John's Place, Brooklyn.

On his return from France he went to Oklahoma and was married there. He had expected to send for his wife in the near future, as soon as he had completely recovered his health. His father said there was no reason for suicide and believes the death was accidental.

"Lady, there are two empty seats in my hallway"

SHE was a schoolgirl. The "lady" was a government official whose duty it is to teach school children the value of milk.

To make her talk interesting, the "lady" asked the children to think of their bodies as a house. She made the building of bodily health a game for the youngsters. They were to build a "strong house."

She told them of the little white "teeth people" who live in the mouth—the hallway of their house. Then the little girl sidled up to the speaker and pointing to her mouth lisped: "Lady, there are two empty seats in my hallway." Sure enough, two of her front teeth were gone.

It isn't hard to get children to drink milk if a little thought is used in putting the idea in their minds. The mind of a child is like wax waiting for impressions. Tell your children that milk makes bones and teeth—which it does—that milk helps their bodies to grow big, strong, and healthy.

If you can make the drinking of milk a game to them, as the teacher did, so much the better.

It is worth much to give any child enough milk. Growth that is held back in childhood can never be regained. Many men and women of short stature lost the inches they could have grown when they were children.

Drink milk yourself—a quart a day. But whether you do or not, see that the children drink enough.
